

Three Women Win Three Capital Prizes In 'What Did You See To-Day?' Contest

First, $100, Proves Almost a Knockout for Young Mrs. Fay Lindo, Who'll Spend It on Her Baby—Second Prize Winner Is a Trained Nurse.

Three women won capital prizes in the fifth week of The Evening World's "What Did You See?" campaign to educate the public in observation and writing the English language simply and correctly. It is especially gratifying to the editor of this feature that the first prize goes to a young mother who can use the money to good advantage and wrote a little article that displays the qualities which The Evening World is trying to develop.

It thousands of our contributors had read the page every day they would not have sent in matter that had already been printed. Our duplicates on queer or comical signs advertising certain businesses fill the waste baskets. We have found that the winners of the big prizes, in 90 per cent. of cases, are persons who have read the page daily.

These are this week's winners:
FIRST PRIZE, $100—Mrs. FAY LINDO, No. 321 Davis Avenue, Arlington, N. J.
SECOND PRIZE, $50—STELLA R. COWEN, No. 160 West 95th Street, Manhattan.
THIRD PRIZE, $25—THOMAS C. DANIELS, No. 109A Judge Street, Elmhurst.
FOURTH PRIZE, $10—BETTY SMITH, No. 2112 Beverly Road, Brooklyn.

We sent a young reporter, who thinks he is sophisticated because he covers the West Side Police Court, over to notify Mrs. Fay Lindo of No. 321 Davis Avenue, Arlington, N. J., that she had won the $100 prize. Here is his report to the editor of "What Did You See To-Day?"

"Say, it was a knockout. I find a nice little cottage and I go in and I find a nice little lady and I tell her she's won the $100 prize, and she has to catch hold of a table to keep from flopping.

"What do you think she does? She runs into another room and she comes out with a beautiful kid in her arms and says, 'I certainly can use this for the baby.'

"Well, what do you think? She's only twenty-one years old and she was married when she was seventeen, and her husband is a salesman and a doggone good scout, and her baby is two and a half years old. This was the first piece she ever wrote for 'What Did You See?' but she has read every one of them.

"But it may be a gift. Her sister, who lives out in Lead, St. D., has written short stories which have been printed.

"She has received several letters condemning her for saying a good word for the flapper. 'Why,' she said, 'it hasn't been so long ago that I was a flapper myself.'

"And let me tell you, old timer," said this kid reporter, "she's a flapper yet."

Here is the story that won the $100 prize:

A GIRL OF TO-DAY.
I was on a Kearney Avenue jitney bus this morning when two young girls of the period got on. Nice, healthy looking girls. One of them stopped at the entrance to pay both fares and the other walked back to find seats. As the girl who paid the fares moved along to join her chum we heard a screech out of her and she said: "Bernice, you have your dress on backwards!" Bernice didn't blush or faint or do any of the other things they do in old fashioned story books. She drawled: "Well, if that isn't the cat's collar!" That was all—except that while we all watched she removed her belt, pulled her arms inside that dress, wiggled and twisted a few times, pushed her arms through the sleeves again, replaced the belt and resumed the conversation which had been interrupted at the corner by the arrival of the jitney. She made us gasp—just a little—but also she made some of us proud of the maiden of 1922.—Mrs. Fay Lindo, No. 321 Davis Avenue, Arlington, N. J.

Miss Stella R. Cowen, a trained nurse of No. 160 West 95th Street, was not at home when the reporter called to inform her that she had added $50 to her bank account, but her mother was pleased. Miss Cowen has sent many contributions to the "What Did You See?" and was awarded nine $1 prizes before she won the little old fifty.

Miss Cowen is a graduate of Normal College. She likes to write and recently won a prize of $85 offered by another paper than The Evening World. We didn't know she was a trained nurse when we picked her for a prize winner, but it was a good pick when you see her story—the second prize.

WHEN YOU WANT A DOCTOR.

I walked through 116th Street, between First and Second Avenues, this afternoon and saw the board signs of physicians on so many house-fronts, one after another, that I came to the conclusion I had stumbled upon the healthiest block in New York. On one side of the street there are Drs. Auletta, Mooney, Capozzi, Caso, Rosano, Salvatore, Miraglia, Amorosa, Spinella, Tanner and Jurich. Then there is Harlem Community House and the headquarters of the East Harlem Health Centre. Directly across the street are Dr. Trencan, Dr. Caturani, Dr. Trotta, Dr. Lazetta and Dr. Reale. Surely, no sickness can make much headway here.—Stella R. Cowen, No. 160 West 95th Street.

This well presented article won the third prize:

"HERE COMES HE BRIDE!"

Southbound traffic in Seventh Avenue at 41st Street was halted on Saturday afternoon and the sidewalk crowds observed a touring car had overshoot the crossing mark by a good twenty feet. This did not escape the vigilant eye of the "pedestrian preserver" in the centre of the square, and a blast from his whistle, accompanied by a suggestive nod of the head, directed the offending chauffeur to turn in to the curb, there to await the threatened "ticket." Cross-town vehicles having received the high sign, the interpreter of red, white and green signals reached inside his blouse for the pad of court invitations and started for the car to deliver it together with the customary lecture. As his eyes roamed upon the occupants of the tonneau, however, he saw at once the reason for the unusually large crowd of spectators. His stern look vanished. He grinned. He stepped up to the car and for the minute that was all he could spare spoke in cheerful and friendly manner to the young people. Then he waved his hand, the car sped away and we saw that forty pairs of old shoes were fastened to the back of the machine, together with a rather well executed "Just Married" sign. It isn't quite the thing to give three cheers on the street for one of the town constables, but one and all of us who witnessed this incident proclaimed and will continue to proclaim its star actor as one of the finest police in the world.—Thomas C. Daniels, No. 109A Judge Street, Elmhurst.

This, printed on Monday, Aug. 21, brought down the fourth prize:

DO FISH BITE DUCKS' FEET?

Every evening our family drives down to the lake at Prospect Park to feed the ducks. More than one hundred of them come as soon as they hear our call. It is interesting to see them descend from the air. As they are about to strike the surface it looks as if they above their feet forward a little, for, apparently, they "skid" into the water. A night or two ago some men in a rowboat were feeding some of the younger ducks. These ducks actually would hop out of the water to take bread from the men's hands. One mother duck with six baby ducks keeps the others away until her children have had all they require. Sometimes she takes some bread herself, but more often she simply breaks it up for the little ones. When the ducks are fed we always throw a few pieces of bread into the water to see the fish come for them. Sometimes it seems to me that the fish annoy the ducks while the ducks are dining. I feel almost certain that they bite at the ducks' feet.—Betty Smith, No. 2112 Beverly Road, Brooklyn.

CAFE MANAGER PINCHED FOR BOOZE UNDER TABLE

Arrested on Charge That Patron Had Liquor in Place.

John Tierney, thirty-five years old, manager of the La Vie Restaurant, 48th Street and Broadway, was arrested in his place early this morning by Patrolman John Rose of the West 47th Street Station, who says he saw John Mulcahy, twenty-eight years old of No. 115 West 155th Street, a mechanic who was with a woman, drink from a bottle of whiskey under the table. Prohibition officials recently inaugurated a campaign against flask drinkers and warned restaurants, cabarets and road houses against permitting patrons to display liquor.

CONSERVATION URGED BY JERSEY OFFICIAL

TRENTON, Aug. 25.—Chairman William T. Grier of the New Jersey Fuel Commission to-day wrote to wholesale and retail coal dealers in the State urging extreme care in coal distribution to insure consumers against injustice.

Grier also urged that householders use pea coal in combination with the larger sizes, as the supply of pea coal would probably be larger than other domestic sizes.

THREE KINGS PETITIONS THROWN OUT BY BOARD

One Called Defective, Two With Too Few Signatures.

The Board of Elections to-day threw out three petitions of designs in Kings County. That of Joseph L. McCarthy, Democratic designee as Assemblyman of the 15th District, was set aside on the declaration that the petition was defective.

The petitions of James O'Neill, Democrat, as candidate for the Assembly from the 4th District, and of William K. Rust, Republican, as State Committeeman from the 22d Assembly District, were held to have insufficient signatures.
